UD WINS REGIONAL, LOCAL PR HONORS

DAYTON, Ohio -- The University of Dayton's office of public relations has won a number of regional and local awards for writing, editing and photography.

In the International Association of Business Communicators' annual Bronze Quill Award competition, UD won eight awards. Deborah McCarty Smith and Kate Cassidy won an award of excellence for Campus Report in the category of non-profit newsletters. Thomas M. Columbus, Teri Rizvi and Smith won an award of excellence in the non-profit brochures category for "Building Partnerships in Advanced Technology."

Rizvi won awards of excellence in news writing for "Efforts Increase to Woo Minorities to Education" and in feature writing for "The Poet and the Song," a story about UD English professor Herbert Martin and his work with the poetry of Paul Laurence Dunbar. She also received an award of merit for "It's Neat, It's Fun, It's Science," an article on the Challenger Learning Center. All three pieces appeared in Dimensions, UD's alumni quarterly.
